STATE BEER TAX LIKELY EFFECTIVE FRIDAY

Pinchot Ready To Approve Beer Tax Bill Friday

Measure To Get Approval And Become Effective In State Tomorrow

TAX RATE WILL BE $1.24 PER BARREL

Delay In Signing Due To Fact Stamps Not Yet Ready For Use

(International News Service)
HARRISBURG, May 4.—Pennsylvania's "cut" out of the beer traffic will start tomorrow when Gov. Gifford Pinchot expects to sign the bill which taxes the brew at the rate of $1.24 per barrel and a half-cent per bottle.

He signed the beer control bill yesterday, as well as the McClure constitutional convention bill.

Under the latter measure, Pennsylvania on next November 7 will elect 15 delegates who will meet in convention on December 5 to ratify or reject the proposal to end national prohibition.

Effective June 1, the beer control bill, now on the statute books, does not become effective until June 1. On and after that date all places selling legalized malt brew and wine must display licenses which will be issued by the county treasurers. The license fees from retailers will revert to the municipalities in which the licensed establishments are located.

Revenue under the taxation bill will go to the state and the amount is estimated by Governor Pinchot at $10,000 a day. During the next two years, at least, it will be diverted for unemployment relief. The tax measure is to go into effect immediately with the governor's signature, under the terms of the bill. Because the stamps and crowns which producers and distributors must purchase and attach to barrels and bottles have not been printed, Governor Pinchot had to delay signing the bill until tomorrow. Otherwise, with revenue stamps unavailable, all beer released by breweries would be technically in violation of the law.

PA NEW OBSERVES

More garden stuff will be raised in New Castle this year than ever before. Many plots of ground about the city, which have never before been used for gardens, are being plowed and planted, it is noted. These are in addition to the many new garden plots planted last year.

Pa New observed one of the strangest license plates has yet seen, on the street here yesterday. It bore the inscription Q 1609, gray letters on a black background, and above the rear plate, was a smaller one with the letters G. B. above it.

In a certain section of the city yesterday afternoon, a woman was noticed spading up a garden plot, while her husband stood by, telling her how it should be done.

Live frogs, and big fellows too, were noticed in a local fish market today. For anyone who craves frog legs, one of them looked big enough to provide a meal in itself.

One of the new books on the non-fiction shelves of the local library is "The Complete Dog Book" by Dr. William A. Bruffe. It should interest dog owners.

Turn On Floodlights At Airport To Aid Flier Encircling City

Floodlights at the New Castle Airport landing field were turned on last night about 10 o'clock to aid a flier who apparently was circling over the city somewhat bewildered. The lights apparently allowed the flier to get his bearings, and he did not land, but continued on his way.

The storm of yesterday made a low ceiling and according to airport attaches the flier would have difficulty "picking up" lights.

Call from Leesburg
The first telephone call to 9365-R, the airport, stating a plane apparently was lost, came from Leesburg. Joe Grotefend was at the airport and the floodlights were turned on quickly.

Within a few moments a North Hill resident sent a call to the airport, and within a few more minutes the sergeant of police, Marion J. Young, also telephoned to the airport.

By this time Bill Millson arrived at the airport and was ready to greet the "lost pilot" should he desire to descend at the local port. However, the plane did not fly over the airport and probably seeing the lights, determined his position. (Continued On Page Two)

SAYRE HOSPITAL BURNS; RESCUE 226 PATIENTS

(International News Service)
SAYRE, Pa., May 4.—Fire swept through the Robert Packer Memorial hospital here during the night, endangering the lives of 226 patients who were rescued by firemen. The entire hospital, except the office building, was destroyed.

The blaze, believed to have originated in a patient's room on the ground floor, quickly spread through the frame structure, most of which was only a single story high. A drizzling, cold rain hampered rescue work and many of the patients were affected by exposure. Many were removed to a hospital at Waverly, N. Y.

Several firemen were overcome by smoke as fire companies from surrounding towns aided in fighting the flames. An investigation of the cause of the fire started immediately.

Swick Against Inflation Bill

Special Washington Correspondent
New Castle News

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 4.—Representative J. Howard Swick was unsuccessful yesterday in defeating passage of the Roosevelt inflation program through the house on Wednesday.

The inflation plan was approved by a 307 to 86 ballot. Against it were 79 Republicans and seven Democrats. For it were 273 Democrats, 30 Republicans, and four Farmer-Laborites.

Representative Cochran of Mercer joined with Congressman Swick in voting against the inflation scheme.

Business Upturn Noted In District

(International News Service)
Whirling of spindles, turning of factory wheels and the roar of blast furnaces today brought a cheerful accompaniment to the definite business upturn noted in the Western Pennsylvania district during the last few days.

A survey of the district by International News Service revealed: Day and night crews are working full time at the Standard Steel Spring Company and at the Pittsburgh Forgings Company, both of Coraopolis.

Increased operations have been noted at the Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt Company at Neville Island.

The Creighton plant of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company has recalled 600 men. Operations have been resumed by the Pittsburgh Crucible Steel Com-

WILL ROGERS says:

(Special To The News)
WASHINGTON, May 4.—Seemed good to get in here today and see old friends. Mr. Vice President turned over his office to me to hold conferences in. He is the same Garner he was even before he was speaker. Had long chat with Speaker Rainey. Saw the house pass the inflation bill, the biggest bill ever to pass any legislature in the history of the world.

Invited right into our new treasury's office, Mr. Woodin, while the Federal Reserve Board was in session. He says, "Maybe you can give us a laugh, we can't get anybody to give us any money." They seemed cheerful, and they are the ones to dig it up.

Then over to Lew Douglas, the old Arizona cowpuncher, head of the budget, who says, "You are just in time. All I need to balance the books today is six billion."

State Assembly May Be Ready To Adjourn Friday

Compromise With Pinchot Will Allow Legislature To End Sessions

SENATE TO ACT ON APPROPRIATIONS

Special Session Of Legislature May Be Needed If Bond Vote Fails

By WILLIAM J. KELLY
International News Service Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, May 4.—All roads pointed to adjournment of the General Assembly sine die Friday as the Senate prepared to pass finally and throw into conference committee today the general appropriation bill to finance the cost of state government during the next biennium.

The hope of adjourning finally Friday rested upon the probability of a compromise with Governor Gifford Pinchot. Leaders, however, were confident the matter can be ironed out to the satisfaction of all.

Agreement will permit the conference report to be accepted by both houses Friday along with other legislation.

Broad Powers For Roosevelt At Conference

Somewhat Bewildered And Subservient Congress Grants Roosevelt's Desires

DELEGATES WILL HAVE AUTHORITY

Stabilization Of International Currency First Concern Of Administration

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 4.—A somewhat bewildered and subservient congress is steadily forging new and powerful weapons for President Roosevelt's use in the forthcoming world economic conference.

Under powers already vested in the executive, with more to be voted in the next few weeks, it is now assured that the American delegation in London will be able to speak more authoritatively than have American delegates in any other world conference.

Dictatorial Powers
They will speak for Mr. Roosevelt without the necessity of keeping a wary eye on Congress. For congress has already voted dictatorial powers to the president in many of the most important matters on the Agenda, including devaluation of the dollar, currency expansion, the re-establishment of silver, control over domestic commodity prices, and restriction of agricultural production. Next week may see added to the presidents powers that of arbitrarily reducing tariff rates up to 50 per cent.

The net result of this unprecedented authority being vested in the executive branch of the government is to send the American delegates into the conference in a position to drive bargains without the ever-present fear of congressional reprobation. They will speak for Mr. Roosevelt, and Mr. Roosevelt already speaks for congress. It is doubtful if Mussolini's Italians or Hitler's Germans will be more confident of their authority.

Stabilize Currency
Stabilization of international currency is a first and vital concern of the administration. Until currency is stabilized, there is little use of negotiating tariff reductions, upon which secretary of state Hull's heart is set. (Continued On Page Two)

PEGGY McMATH

From Canada to New York and far out to sea the search for 10-year-old Peggy McMath, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neil McMath of Harwichport, Mass., formerly of Detroit, has been extended. Attempts to make contact with the kidnapers who abducted the child from her school, at Harwich Center, Mass., have been made in the vicinity of Cape Cod where Colonel Lindbergh futilely attempted to meet the persons who stole his son more than a year ago. Peggy is the granddaughter of Francis C. McMath, millionaire industrialist of Detroit. Photos are of Peggy and her parents.

Rail Message By Roosevelt Ready Today

President Will Give Congress Plan For Reorganization Of Railroads

(International News Service)
WASHINGTON, May 4.—President Roosevelt's plan for temporary railroad reorganization was ready for submission to congress this afternoon, marking the next-to-last of his sweeping emergency proposals. A public works program will go forward next week as the final major piece of legislation he will ask of the special session.

Involving the creation of a "national railroad coordinator," and designed to eliminate wasteful duplication of service, Mr. Roosevelt's remedy for the hard-hit carriers is frankly experimental. On the basis of experience gained by actual operation of the temporary set-up, he intends to draft recommendations for permanent reorganization which (Continued On Page Two)

Donkey Ties Up Pittsburgh Cars

Takes Eight Men And Several Volunteers To Get Mule Off Car Tracks

(International News Service)
PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 4.—"A da'gun mule," remarked a motorist disgustedly, "is a mule until he dies."

An obdurate mule caused a 10-minute trolley traffic tie-up today when it fell on the street car tracks in downtown Pittsburgh and, mule-like, refused to get up.

It took eight men recruited from trolley crews and several volunteers to lift the mule to its feet.

No Clues As Yet To Mystery In New England Kidnaping Sensation

HARWICH, Mass., May 4.—Fifty state troopers were started off from police headquarters today in an intensive search for the kidnaped "Peggy" McMath, ten-year-old heiress, with the reminder from Lieut. James Hughes of the Massachusetts state police that "the Lindbergh baby was found within a mile of his home."

Rumors that a new development would soon "break" spread around Harwich as police officials darted here and there in cars, keeping their own counsel.

When William Lee, the contact man at the McMath home, finally came to his twice-postponed conference with newspapermen at 11:20 a. m., he had nothing to report at the moment, adding:

"I might have something for you soon—something that would make good newspaper news."

Says No Contact Yet
Asked if that meant that a contact had been established with the kidnapers he answered:

"No."
Asked if an arrest was imminent he replied evasively, "anything might happen."

Lee said Mr. and Mrs. McMath (Continued On Page Two)

The governor also signed the McElwee bill providing that officers of sixth class counties shall be members of the salary board when matters affecting their offices are under consideration.

The Boyd bill authorizing corporations to issue capital stock and specifying the conditions under which transfers of classification can be made was approved. The governor also signed the Rice bill imposing penalties for the improper use of food orders issued by the state emergency relief board or other relief agency.

Here the spring has long been with us and the fruit trees are in bloom, and the spuds are in the furrows and the flax is on the loom, and there hasn't been a prophet, not a single, measly one who has murmured in his whiskers, well the peach crop's surely done. Every year I hear the wailing, every year it is the same, till it seems to be a custom or a habit or a game. Every year they spoil the peaches but when harvest time comes round, there are peaches on the branches, there are peaches on the ground. But each year they kill the peach crop, but it doesn't stay that way, and the prophets eat their phrases, weather's sixty five today.

PROBE NAZI PLOT REVEALED IN AUSTRIA

Nazi Plot To Seize Austria Is Uncovered

Would Press For Immediate Austro-German Union With Hitler In Control

SOVEREIGNTY OF AUSTRIA AT STAKE

(International News Service)
VIENNA, May 4.—A sensational plot by Austrian Nazis to overthrow the government of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss was uncovered by the government today.

Official announcement of the discovery said the Nazis had planned to oust the government by force of arms and enforce an immediate Austro-German union.

Such a plot, if successful, would go far in hastening the widely predicted Fascist central European bloc, vastly extending the influence of Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany.

A communique issued by the Austrian government charged the plans for the thwarted putsch were supported by German Nazis.

This, said the communique, seriously endangered the sovereignty of Austria.

It was indicated Austria is prepared to protest against alleged German Nazi implication in the plot, appealing to world powers for protection.

will be presented to the regular session of congress next January.

National Coordinator
It is expected that Interstate Commerce Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman will be designated national coordinator. Under him will be regional coordinators. The country will be divided into three sections, east, west, and south, and a committee of the railroad operators' own choosing set up in each.

This set-up will be expected to unify terminal facilities, do away with duplicating passenger and freight services and reorganize capital structure insofar as possible.

Organized labor is fighting the program vigorously on the ground it will result in widespread reductions in personnel.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at liver cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

It is bile that is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resist a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

which would seem to be rushing the season just a little bit. It might have been that the suits were being put out for an airing to rid them of moths.

A local dealer told Pa New this morning that he has sold more kerosene lamps this year than he has since he went into business 18 years ago.

There should be a good story behind that piece of a broken golf club on North Jefferson street. Was it just the victim of an innocent accident or did it meet its Waterloo at the hands of an angry Wellington on one of the local battlefields?

The Elm street Y. W. C. A. is trying to raise funds, Pa New is told, to provide for the entire upkeep of the building and all expenses except the salary of its secretary. The Elm street building has been a great boon to the colored people of the community.

Just when the Brownie pack, an organization of little girls sponsored by the Girl Scout council, was thriving in splendid shape and had entered into numerous activities, a couple of the Brownies got the measles. The pack meetings were temporarily abandoned, but the Brownies, although depressed for the moment, are by no means submerged!

Riveting of the structural steel frame-work of the new postoffice building has started, and the crowds of spectators at the building are given another thrill as they watch the red hot rivets being hurled around through the structure.

One of the familiar signs of spring was a flock of crows in the woods along Rural avenue this morning. The crow does not have a very musical voice, but his caw, caw, at this season is a welcome harbinger of the good old summer time.

Farmers report that the recent rain has put the ground in first class shape for plowing. Few farmers have been able to get much plowing done this spring and the indications are that corn and oats planting will be late.

Funds for purchasing these necessary supplies comes entirely from donations of the women of New Castle, either through membership in the organization or through a direct contribution.

Mrs. S. W. Perry is president of the society; Miss Edna Wilson, secretary, and Mrs. Reed Megown, treasurer. Besides these officers, there is a large executive committee.

In addition to conducting an annual campaign for funds to carry on the work, the ladies who are members of the organization have done a splendid work in the past in the manufacture of the necessary garments.

At their meetings on Wednesday mornings in the hospital they cut the materials and make them into pillow cases, sheets, hospital gowns, etc. They also do the necessary mending of these garments.

The women of New Castle are asked to keep the coming campaign in mind, and when they are solicited for membership in the organization, or for a contribution to this fund, to give as freely as their funds will permit, as it is one of the most splendid civic projects with which they can be identified.

They can be identified.

STATE ASSEMBLY MAY BE READY TO ADJOURN FRIDAY

Clarion Teachers Colleges and Shamokin and Coaldale state hospitals were contained in the bill as reported to the Senate. Senator Harry B. Scott, Centre, chairman of the appropriation committee in the upper branch, placed the 1933-34 budget figure at $148,639,844 as compared with $153,275,373, as recommended by the governor. This cut of $4,635,529 represented the stumbling block the conference committee hopes to remove.

Payment of $2,439,000 to universities and colleges, $125,000 to state-aided educational institutions and $2,222,140 to state-aided hospitals is contingent upon adoption of a $25,000,000 bond issue by the voters in November. If this bond issue is not approved, a special session of the General Assembly to revamp state finances is admittedly the only solution because $20,000,000 also has been earmarked for relief.

May Compromise
Senator Scott was virtually certain that a compromise would be reached.

"Revenues are in sight which will yield more than the $186,000,000 required for all purposes during the next biennium, including unemployment relief," he said.

Referring to a $150,000 slash from Governor Pinchot's recommendation for the public service commission, Scott said: "The governor's budget was prepared at a time when the executive and chairman (Dr. Clyde L.) King of the public service commission were much better friends than they are now."

Appropriations Lower
"Elimination of the unnecessary parole work made it possible to cut $350,000 from the sum allotted to the Department of Justice. The governor's recommendation was slashed to $463,900."

The health department appropriation was reduced by $340,000 to $3,511,000, which "should not lessen that department's efficiency." The sum for operation of the governor's office was pared down to the 1927-28 figure of $377,000, while the Department of Agriculture gets $3,379,000, more than a million below the recommendation.

Approximately $887,350 was taken from the Department of Property and Supplies, leaving $5,212,750. Mines lost $160,000 making its appropriation $503,000.

STATE TROOPERS SEARCH FOR GIRL NEAR HER HOME

were standing by the telephone at their home. He added: "We are all hopeful. We do not believe Peggy has been harmed. We feel that this is not a case of spite. We think it is a case of ransom—nothing else."

He said even if ransom had been asked he could not so inform the press because the father did not want to jeopardize any contacts he may establish with the kidnappers.

Both Mr. and Mrs. McMath had "five or six hours" of sleep last night. Asked how the mother was feeling, Lie replied:

"She is bearing up very well indeed. There has been no weeping on her part, no breaking down."

Search Everywhere.
Every camp, every gas filling station, every store and every place that might be harboring the girl was ordered searched. Lieut. Hughes instructed his men to at first concentrate within a mile radius of the Harwich grammar school, from in front of which the girl was kidnapped Tuesday afternoon, and gradually extend their operations over the entire Cape Cod area.

"You are to stop all suspicious cars and watch for either a girl or a boy," Lieut. Hughes told the troopers, pointing out that the kidnappers might have disguised the kidnapped girl by changing her attire.

"You all have radios in your cars. If you find anything suspicious, communicate with headquarters at once."

"Keep in mind the Lindbergh baby was found within a mile of his home."

Lieut. Hughes was in active charge of the troopers and was working under the direction of Brig. Gen. Daniel Needham, newly appointed state commissioner of public safety, who has come here and taken supervision over the hunt for the kidnappers.

Harwich, Mass., May 4.—Ever-deepening mystery settled like a black cloud today over the kidnapping of Margaret ("Peggy") McMath, ten-year-old school girl—a case which in some respects parallels the Lindbergh abduction which stunned the world.

While the distracted parents, Mr. and Mrs. Neil C. McMath, former wealthy residents of Detroit, Mich., waited in their beautiful home here for some message from the kidnappers, the authorities launched a sweeping and systematic search for Captain John H. Towers (above), one of the pioneer fliers of the navy, will probably succeed the late Rear Admiral Moffett as chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics.

Commanded the Navy's trans-Atlantic flight in 1919.

The girl the length and breadth of the exclusive Cape Cod peninsula. "Please be good to my Peggy and bring her back safe to us," was the father's poignant plea to the kidnappers.

A dreadful silence, growing more ominous hourly, has become the only answer to the father's plea.

The Massachusetts authorities were as much at sea for a definite clue as the New Jersey authorities at a similar stage in the Lindbergh baby kidnapping investigation.

Today, forty-eight hours after the abduction of the child from in front of the Harwich grammar school, which she was attending, no contact of any kind has been established with the kidnappers.

McMath's declaration that he would raise all the money he could to pay for his child's safe return and his promise to the kidnappers, through the press, of immunity from prosecution has gone unanswered.

Hunt For Car
Boston, May 4.—Activities of the State police, working on the Peggy McMath kidnapping case outside the Cape Cod area, suddenly centered today around a New York automobile and three occupants—a negro chauffeur and two men, one of the latter known to have been engaged in liquor smuggling on Cape Cod.

The car—a sixteen cylinder sport model sedan, dark blue and with yellow colored wheels—corresponded to the description of the kidnappers' automobile. A State trooper recalled stopping the car in Attleboro last Thursday, when it was enroute to Cape Cod. The cross-cut route to Cape Cod from the main New York to Boston Shoreline highway is at Wrentham, seven miles above Attleboro. However, the occupants had inquired the way to Boston, although the bootlegger was in the car, knows the territory thoroughly.

A puzzling angle was that the registration plates numbers were found to be unregistered at the motor vehicles registry bureau in Albany, N. Y.

By teletype today, State police asked all police to be on the watch for the car.

BROAD POWERS FOR ROOSEVELT AT CONFERENCE

is set. For wildly fluctuating dollars, pounds and francs can nullify any agreements so reached.

The American delegates will be in a position to talk turkey on currency stabilization. They can point to Roosevelt's powers to devalue the dollar, issue green-backs, accept silver in payment of foreign debts, and his czar-like control over some 40 per cent of the world's gold supply. The exercise of these powers can stabilize currencies or send them fluctuating.

Tariff Barriers
After currency stabilization comes scheme of things. Secretary of state Hull, who will head the American delegation, is profoundly convinced that most of the world's economic ills come from arbitrary tariffs and other artificial trade restrictions, such as the quotas which so effectively applies to keep out foreign goods.

The make-up of the American delegation is proceeding apace. Besides Hull, it is expected the principal delegates will be Prof. Raymond Moley, under secretary of state, and Mr. Roosevelt's chief adviser in foreign affairs, James M. Cox, Democratic presidential candidate in 1920; Norman H. Davis, American Ambassador-at-large to Europe; Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, chairman of the senate's powerful foreign relations committee; an outstanding American industrialist, yet to be chosen, and probably a banker. Enough Republicans will be included to give the commission a bi-Partisan complexion.

Debts Not Important
The foreign debts, which loom so large in European eyes, are not considered of such vital importance in the Rooseveltian viewpoint. They are recognized as an important factor, but ranking considerably lower than currency stabilization, monetary standards, and tariff and trade adjustments, once these latter are disposed of, the view is held by Mr. Roosevelt and his closest advisers that the debts will largely take care of themselves through expanded international trade.

Whether this theory regarding the debts will work out in practice, or whether European debtors will accept it, remains to be seen.

In any event, the debts represented about the only major part of the agenda upon which the American delegation will not be able to speak authoritatively. Congress still retains a check-rein on that issue.

Deaths of the Day

Mrs. Caroline Davis Schlegel
Mrs. Thomas O'Brien, East Falls street, received word of the death Sunday evening of her niece, Mrs. Caroline Davis Schlegel, Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Schlegel was the daughter of Samuel and Sadie Lewis Davis, and a sister of Louis O'Brien, former residents of this city.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon from the Semmler-Funk Funeral home and interment was made in the Southside cemetery, Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Hamill Funeral
Funeral services for Mrs. Iva M. Hamill, wife of Rev. Robert Hamill, were held Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the Mt. Jackson United Presbyterian church, where she had labored for many years as the pastor's wife.

The services were conducted by Dr. S. E. Irvine of the New Castle First United Presbyterian church and Dr. C. D. Fulton, of Beaver and the church was overflowing with relatives and friends saying their last farewell to one who had been a comfort to many.

The gorgeousness of the floral tributes, which filled the front of the church, completely surrounding her, silently attested to the love of those who had known her good works.

tion and took off on his desired route.

According to Whitey Franklin, yesterday's storm made visibility bad.

Months ago the lights for the airport were purchased by the city and installed by the airport. They were secured for the purpose of aiding fliers lost at night.

Two Local Pilots Forced Down
Two of the local pilots, it was reported today, had to make quick landings on Tuesday afternoon, one on the Moffatt farm in Leesburg vicinity, and the other at Mercer.

During the morning Bill Milson of "The Blue Bird," flew to Erie. Homer Franklin, accompanied by Whitey Franklin, hopped off in The Waco. They started back from Erie in the early afternoon.

When Lane and Franklin reached Leesburg the wind was of tornado caliber and Lane decided to bring down the ship. He brought it down on the Moffatt farm, it is said.

They had not been down long until the wind ripped up several trees nearby. After 10 minutes on the ground, Lane hopped off again and soon had his ship in the hangar here.

Milson, however, ran into the storm in the vicinity of Mercer. Instead of continuing on, he landed at Mercer airport until the fury of the storm was spent.

NAZARENE PROGRAM IS EVANGELISTIC

business of the assembly, and the evening session was of an evangelistic nature.

C. Warren Jones, district superintendent, presided in the evening and the spiritual enthusiasm was aroused by a stirring song service, directed by Rev. Ernest Marsh, Terrace, Pa. The walls resounded with the echoes of "Tell Me the Old, Old Story" and "What a Friend We Have in Jesus".

Rev. James McGown, of Good-year Heights had the evening prayer and special numbers were sung by Eddie Patzsch, song evangelist of East Palestine; R. G. Shuman, Jamestown, N. Y., and Ernest Marsh, with the concluding song "Amazing Grace" sung with exceptional fervor by Prof. A. S. London and Rev. Arthur Gould.

Evening Speaker
Rev. Geran Roberts, a graduate of Bethany college, Bethany, Okla., was introduced as the speaker of the evening, and after acknowledging a debt of gratitude to Prof. A. S. London, former dean of Bethany college and to Rev. S. S. White, a former teacher, he addressed the group, taking as his subject "Real Discipleship".

He stated that real discipleship lies in following the example of Christ's life, which is perfect. The grasping of the Christian vision is one of the important things of life and to know what we believe and why, and to keep a fine grip on reality, then we can know that our sins are blotted out and our heart is right with God.

He went on to say that our lives must be one of precept and example, filled with service to God and man, placing salvation on a plane of giving, not taking.

He concluded by saying that every human is allotted a sphere of influence and as God's greatest concern was mankind, we should have a passion, a burning zeal for the souls of men and our charge and obligation is to bring the gospel to hungry souls, persevering to the end.

The business sessions are being held throughout the day and the evening sessions given over to evangelistic speakers. This evening at 7:30 E. S. T. missionary night will be observed and the speakers will be those who have given many years of their lives to spreading the gospel in heathen lands.

More delegates are arriving each day and it is anticipated that the cathedral, where services will be held Sunday, will be crowded throughout the day.

"THE UNEMPLOYED BRAIN TRUST"

WASHINGTON has been subject to many invasions since the beginning of the business depression, but none of them has been quite so unique as that of the arrival of the "unemployed brain trust." It is a group of delegates representing jobless graduates of eight of the larger institutions of learning. The New York contingent went down by bus, but other graduates hitch-hiked from various parts of the country. Whether their interview with the president will prove meaningless, or whether it will result in some practical improvement in their situation, remains to be seen.

The truth of the matter is that the unemployed college man is in as bad a fix as the jobless day laborer. In reality he is worse off, because the humbler man is accustomed to privations and can more quickly adapt himself to circumstances. But the white collar man feels rather helpless. As one of the banners of the invading army declared, "You Can't Eat a Sheepskin." It was a shrewd idea to have a classmate of the president's son lead the academic march to the white house. A touch of humor is also to be seen in offering old diplomas at cut rates—some of them as low as thirty cents.

All of this is an effective way of advertising the plight of the white collar man. But the question of what can be done about it is quite another matter. When we have a depression that is not only nation-wide, but world-wide, we are all in the same boat. When recovery comes all should share in its blessings. It is true that there are some disadvantages on both sides. During the era of great prosperity educated men and women holding clerical positions benefited less than any other class and they are now condemned to suffer more acutely. Learning is rightly esteemed; and yet a great professor of mathematics unable to swim would be in a bad way if he fell out of a boat in the middle of a stream.

In designating themselves as the "unemployed brain trust" these college men are evidently having a little sport at the expense of the college professors who are helping President Roosevelt to run the government. Yet all of them, in and out of the white house, should realize that it is a fallacy to depend entirely upon the government.

WOMEN IN POLITICS

Increasing interest of women in politics was reported to the general council of the National League of Women Voters at its session in Washington.

Statistics were presented showing that reorganization of governmental units to eliminate waste had been supported by women voters in 23 states and that 22 states they had given their backing to readjustment of tax problems.

In what proportion they backed these projects was not shown. The probability is that they divided in about the same proportion as did men.

The increased interest they are taking in political and other public questions is a desirable manifestation. That they have or will raise the general level of politics, though, is a matter for continued speculation. Enlarged participation by any intelligent class in public affairs, nevertheless, is a development of no little importance.

BUSINESS SWINGS UPWARD

Evidence that business is at last beginning to show signs of a revival is continued in a summary of general business conditions just issued by the Federal Reserve Board at Washington.

This report points out that there is now apparent an increase in the activities of commodity and security markets. The decline in the production and distribution of commodities late in February and early in March has been halted, and an upswing is taking place, reflected especially in the steel industry—which, you might remember, has always been regarded as a barometer of general business conditions.

All of this doesn't mean that good times will be here day after tomorrow. But it does seem to indicate that we are on the way back up.

GET IT OVER WITH

Authorities in closest touch with both the administration and congress feel rather certain that the first week in June will witness the finish of the present session of congress.

With the president's railroad and public works programme due for presentation to the congress the Muscle-Shoals, home mortgage refinancing and securities regulation items hold preferred places in the calendar of business already before one or the other of the congress branches.

It would appear well that a definite goal be fixed and that congress "cease up" its present programme and leaves the capital as soon as possible.

The session has been remarkable in the fact that the administration has met with little or no powerful opposition in either branch and that the Roosevelt programme has been put through almost without a hitch, which is, of course, decidedly unusual procedure at Washington.

The important thing now seems to be that definite completion of the programme be accomplished as soon as possible and that congress then remove itself from the scene and give the whole rehabilitation project of the new administration a chance to prove itself one way or the other.

A decent law is one that doesn't affect the conduct of decent men.

Nothing else increases the value of affection like being alienated.

One trouble seems to be that too many people are above the law and not above lawlessness.

If Russia and Japan keep on making faces at each others one of them really may get mad after a while.

Japan claims she is in China to get back her boycott-lost business. Well a flotilla of battleships can deliver a hot sales talk.

The Texas legislature has ordered an investigation of a fight in which one of its members received a black eye. Well, legislatures have to find something to do.

THE YEAST IN LIFE.

I remember when I was a boy and my mother would send me to the brewery, down by the bridge, to get a pail of brewer's yeast. She made her own bread, and she had to have yeast for that. We drank no beer in our house. Father and mother drank coffee and tea with their meals; there was a cow in the barnyard and good water flowed from the faucet in the kitchen. We had plenty of milk and all the water we wanted. But no beer.

So going to the brewery for a bucket of yeast was a great experience. It was dark and cool in the brewery down by the river and the men who worked there were stout and jolly. We were filled with awe when we'd see one of them fill a quart dipper with beer and clear off the foam with a stick and toss it down and wipe his mouth with his hairy forearm and give a great laugh and go on about his business and turning gadgets or rolling barrels or filling our pail with yeast and taking our nickel and sending us on our way.

There was mystery in that yeast, too. Life was in it. It had some strange, self-renewing, multiplying power that made it live forever. Although my mother used it freely in her bread, it was not soon exhausted and we did not need to go often to the brewery.

We were children, however, and we accepted the magic of the stuff. Yeast was yeast and bread was bread and life was life, and that was the end of such things.

I am certain it did not occur to me even once that a boy might become a man and become aware that there are other kinds of yeast in life more precious even than that yeast we bought at the home town brewery.

He did not know that an idea, a memory or a dream might also be yeast. That a friend might be yeast. That hope and love are yeast. That a temptation fought and downed, or a battle accepted and won, are yeast for future living. That grief and torture are yeast, too. That laughter and delight may live with a man and renew his strength forever, and be the leaven of his daily bread.

I knew none of these truths when I was a small boy riding on my bicycle to the brewery with a nickel in my hand and a tin pail dangling on the handlebars, or coming home again carrying the yeast carefully so it might not slop over and be lost. I did not know then, but I hope I do know them now. Because that knowledge about the yeast that is in life is almost as precious as the yeast itself.

YOUR CONSCIENCE

You have in the past overstepped the line between right and wrong. You were filled with remorse but think your infractions are not known. You have eased your conscience and made resolves not to transgress. But as time goes on you are tempted again and the lesson you should have learned has lost its effect upon you.

Because you have been fortunate in the past in clearing your skirts in these shameful deals you think your good luck will continue. But it may not continue, and what about it if you are found out? You ought to think back to the time when Old Man Remorse caused you so much uneasiness.

Remember the mental pain you experienced and how it tormented you for fear your irregular dealings should become known.

If you take a little time to think this over, don't you see that you will be better off to keep to the straight and narrow road?

Isn't good will and reputation worth anything to you?

You did really gain before with the chances you took and now time you may not be successful in covering up, but even if you are, your conscience will sear you and the marks show in your face.

CARELESS

I like to toss my coat upon the chair. Though twice ten thousand times I have been told.

There's a place to hang it 'neath the stair.

Likewise a hook designed my hat to hold.

Something within me I can't quite explain.

Makes too much order difficult to bear.

Always, it seems, when I get home again.

I like to toss my coat upon a chair.

To me the home spells ease and true delight.

And closets with their hooks are dark with gloom.

Always I'm over-eager with the night.

To settle in my comfortable room.

Scarce past the door I fling my hat aside.

As if it were a needless weight of care.

And swiftly to be rid of foolish pride I like to toss my coat upon a chair.

BANKING IN CHINA
Some people lack judgment or tact when it comes to ridding themselves of stories that seem to be festering under their domes.

It was a little informal luncheon of some bankers and affiliates and one of the guests was a party who had just returned from the Orient. He was chockfull of stories and reminiscences of his travels and had quite a few which depicted the peculiarities and inherent qualities of the Chinaman. On this line he expatiated at length upon the attitude which the Celestial regarded defaulting bankers and their ilk. He spoke feelingly, with embellishments, of one particular case which had a lasting effect upon banking institutions in the land of the Mongolian.

In this instance the bank blew up and the depositors lost everything. There were no long drawn out legal investigations. The banker was simply beheaded, as were his wife, all of his children, his father, mother, brothers and sisters and, in fact, every blood relation that could be located and was not in hiding.

Bank failures ceased.

There have not been any to speak of since that day.

Somehow or other the men around the table lost their interest in the luncheon, the viands palled and the drinks had a bitter tang.

Really, though, it was myself instead who was not the same. My memory pictures had been too impossibly beautiful.

I came away with a faint uneasiness instead of rest. It seemed that the home in Maine should have been an unduplicated and heavenly place. My dreams were shattered! I wonder if some of your readers have had the same experience.

In Utah, on the other hand, under a statute passed by the last legislature, beer can be made within the state but cannot be sold in the state, and the attorney general has indicated that he believes it to be illegal to advertise beer either in newspapers, billboards or by radio. ## Advance In Steel Production Encourages Business World

Turn For Better In Field Which Has Been Called Barometer Of Industry Arouses Interest Of Country And Raises Hopes Of General Advance

Announcement of increased production in steel causes the public to expect general improvement in industrial and business conditions. Volume of business in this line has often been called the barometer, and its gains are believed to be duplicated in other forms of activity. In this instance it is reported that automotive interests have been gaining.

"When steel is optimistic it sings what is a popular song in the industrial world," says the TOLEDO BLADE, while the ASBURY PARK EVENING PRESS remarks that "steel, the backbone of the industrial body, is doing things in a big way, which means that there is renewed activity in many other lines." Quoting the head of the United States Steel Corporation as stating that the officials "are buoyed up with the hope and comfort that better times are ahead," the OAKLAND TRIBUNE comments: "When steel looks up the nation applauds. For a number of years the industry has been silently watching the dropping figures of production. The more than 56 million gross tons of ingots and castings which was the 1929 record have dwindled until last year's production was about thirteen and a half million tons, or approximately the output of 1904."

The Tribune adds that "production is now at the highest point in more than a year."

"Auspicious evidence of increasing activity" is observed by the NASHVILLE BANNER, with the explanation: "Next in importance to agriculture which in its broad aspect is the basic industry of the nation, and to the automobile industry, taken in connection with those that are collateral to it, steel production is the largest in the country. The economic dictum of a half century ago that the progress of a country can be measured by its use of iron is still relatively correct. Its relation in the perfected form of steel to manufactures, transportation and construction is so close and comprehensive that the steel industry is almost invariably the first to give evidence of the coming of a period of depression. Similarly it is among the first to afford proof of the weakening of depressing factors in the business structure of the country."

"Revival of activities in a basic industry" is proclaimed by the CLEVELAND NEWS, with recognition of the interest of its own community in steel production, and the statement that "a new note of hope is sounded in the automobile industry." The News also states: "Estimates which place Cleveland ahead in steel producing are not based on guesswork, but on the volume of orders piling in. Buying on the part of large manufacturers, against a rise in prices of steel and against a freshening demand for their products is responsible for rapidly accumulating orders. In the automotive industry, one large firm has taken steps to pile up raw materials for six months' requirements."

A cheerier automobile market," agrees the NEW YORK TIMES, "is the main reason for the recent gyrating rise in steel production. But do more automobiles mean recovery or inflation? The grimmer soothsayers insist it is inflation. But one cannot be too sure. People have already been discounting the cheaper dollar. If automobile buying is a flight from the lower-priced cars, why should the lower-priced cars be the first to register such an escape? People should be buying the more expensive and permanent cars, thus solving the double problem of safeguarding a larger number of dollars and providing one's self with an automobile for an indefinite future. Could it be, after all, beer rather an inflation? So many thousands of men going back to work in the breweries and accessory industries, so many beer salesmen running around soliciting orders, mean a demand for automobiles."

Statements by Secretary Roper of the Department of Commerce that he "believes the April comparison with the corresponding month of 1932 would be much more favorable than the returns for the first quarter" are quoted by the BALTIMORE EVENING SUN, with the statement: "All this has a pleasant sound, but the thing we like best is the absence of the old hoody. Nothing whatever is said about scraping the bottom of the depression, or about turning the corner, or about the early advent of normal business. The secretary lets his figures speak for themselves. Yet he did go so far as to predict that April, as a whole, will make a better showing than March, and we submit that even this much prophecy is dangerous. History is far safer. Properly the favorite mode of expression of the new economic era, whenever a public official prophesies, even as mildly as Mr. Roper has done, we seem to get a whiff of the new era. Let the New Deal stick to history and its atmosphere will be much more grateful to the nostrils."

Observing that stockholders of the United States Steel Corporation adopted resolutions "supporting President Roosevelt's economic program" without reservations, the TOPEKA DAILY CAPITAL sees evidence that "business is in sympathy with a New Deal," but takes note of the fact that "it is unusual for one of the premier industrial corporations to inject politics into its annual meetings." This thought also is voiced by the ROANOKE WORLD-NEWS, after reviewing the struggle that the company has made to meet the conditions brought about by the depression. The UNIONTOWN HERALD takes note of the fact that "steel strikes an optimistic note."

During an Indian celebration at Banff, in the Canadian Rockies, Irvin S. Cobb, noted humorist, declared to a white interpreter for the Blackfoot tribe that all women fall for flattery, especially when told they are attractive. Cobb offered to prove this statement by having the interpreter tell a withered old squaw she was a beautiful woman. "What did she say?" asked Cobb.

"She said, you're the fattest liar she ever saw," the interpreter explained.

Per Capita Cost Lower Here Than City Average

By ARTHUR C. WIMER
Special Washington Correspondent
New Castle News
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 4.—The per capita cost of governing New Castle was substantially smaller than the per capita cost of governing the average city of 30,000 or more population in 1931, the Census Bureau reported today.

Per capita expenditures for the maintenance and operation of the general departments of government of the average city of 30,000 or more residents amounted to $46.18 for 1931. Such per capita expenditures in New Castle, on the other hand, were only $29.63. In New Castle, per capita costs fell off five per cent in 1931 as compared with the previous year. In the average large city surveyed, on the other hand, per capita expenditures increased 3.5 per cent in 1931. The per capita net indebtedness of New Castle at the end of 1931 was $63.88. The per capita net indebtedness of the average large city was more than twice as great, or $150.14.

To Take Leads In Senior Play

Betty Joshua G. Brotemarkle

Betty Joshua is cast for the role of leading lady in the senior class play at the Lincoln Avenue school. As Mary Norton she appears in the action with one of the 'seven keys to Baldpate' which give the title to the play. She employs this key in the dead of night to enter Baldpate Inn and secure a crime scoop for her newspaper. At the same time she initiates a romance with the owner of the key that was first on the scene. Miss Joshua is the daughter of the Rev. Clifford S. Joshua and the Rev. Margaret Joshua.

Gene Brotemarkle plays opposite Betty Joshua, as William Hallowell Magee, whose plans to spend twenty-four hours in seclusion at Baldpate are melodramatically interrupted by startling events. As Magee, successful writer of mystery stories, Gene is fitted to the part he will play, breezy and sophisticated in manner, completely at ease in the most impossible situations, he can level a gun with one hand and tap out a chapter or two of a crime story with the other. While this ambidextrous feat is not actual, it is illustrative of Magee's spirit of adventurous authorship. Gene Brotemarkle will be emphatically the star in "Seven Keys to Baldpate."

Mayor Mayne Holds Midnight Court

Discharges Two Who Sober Up
Before Facing
Him

"Yes, I held police court at midnight last night. I let two men who had become sober go to their homes."

The foregoing answer was given by Mayor Mayne today when asked: "Do you hold any police court at midnight?"

When Mayor Mayne took office he said he would establish a precedent by holding police court.

He explained that a man who is incarcerated for some trivial offense should not have to stay all night in jail, be unable to go to work and not receive a hearing until 9 a. m.

The mayor travels nightly to various parts of the city. He makes it a practice to reach the police station at midnight and if prisoners are held for unimportant breaches of law he gives them a hearing.

However, he does not grant hearings to persons who are not able to sleep off a "jag" before midnight.

June 15 Payment Voiced
In House Of Commons

(International News Service)
LONDON, May 4.—A new proposal that Britain default on her June 15 foreign debt payment to the United States was voiced in the house of commons today.

Prompted by failure of Prime Minister MacDonald to reach a definite understanding with President Roosevelt, twelve members, including Lyons Ray and Alexander Ramsay, introduced the following motion:

"That in the opinion of this house the question of continuance of payment of war debts by this country alone is so inextricably interwoven with world economic condition that it is undesirable any further payment should be made unless and until the issues of commodity prices, credits and exchange values have been satisfactorily dealt with by the world economic conference and until such payment is approved by the house."

Present Play At Trinity Church

Cast Does Well In Portrayal Of "An Old Fashioned Mother", Wednesday

Presentation Wednesday evening in the guild room of Trinity Episcopal church of the play "An Old Fashioned Mother" before an audience that filled the place to capacity, was one of the most capable amateur stage productions seen here in some time.

The cast, which had been coached by Mrs. Philip C. Pearson, wife of the rector of the parish, performed in a most capable manner, leaving it difficult to say that any one of the group was outstanding over another, except in so far as the part taken was one of the major parts of the play.

The play presented life in Canton, N. Y. twenty years ago and was presented in three different scenes in the farmhouse of a well to do family. The mother of the family does everything possible for the members of her family and the unfortunate, only in the last days of her life, to be refused aid by her more fortunate children and was all ready to go to the poorhouse, when the prodigal son of the family returned and restored her to her proper place in life.

The members of the cast were Deborah Underhill, a Mother in Israel—Isabel Johnson; Wilbur Bill Pindle, leader of choir—Catherine Adams; Miss Loviz Lovin; Gustard plain sewing and gossip—Mrs. William Hewitt; Isabel Simpcock; the Village Belle—Mrs. Bland; Gloria Perkins; As good as Gold—Florence Williams; Sulley Pindle, the Widder's Mite—Jane Lloyd; John Underhill, the prodigal son—Clarence Seeger; Charles Underhill, the elder brother—Wilbur Shiber; Brother John Quackenbush, a white seculchre—Jack Hope; "Jerry" Gosling, a Merry Heart—Lynn Irwin; Enon Rone, an outcast and wanderer—Howard Gresham; Quintus Todd, the sheriff—Joe Adams.

Expect Stone Will Start Here Shortly

Post Office Erection Speed May Bring First Load In Two Weeks

Clearfield county sandstone will start leaving quarries near Currensville for the New Castle post office within the next two weeks, the A. W. Kutsche company, general contractors for the building announced today.

A contract for the stone was recently awarded the Pennsylvania Sandstone corporation, a Philadelphia company.

With the steel backbone of the new federal structure nearly completed, iron workers today and yesterday passed their time in "trueing up" the heavy beams. Carpenters pushed ahead their construction of foundation wall forms and the concrete makers poured more wall cement. The boiler room floor has also been concreted.

Around the public square site is piled smaller steel beams which will be swung into place just as rapidly as the walls of the building rise.

They might have called it: "MURDER ON THE MOUNTAINSIDE"

IN THE Allegheny Mountains, last August, cars and gasolines were "taken for a ride" such as they had never known before. One after another they were lashed up the mountainside . . . pistons pumping furiously, tires creaking at every curve, bolts and bodies straining almost to the breaking-point. • Here was a test of tests . . . a mighty experiment on the part of the Nation's leading automobile and refining companies to find ways to bring you better engines and better fuels. ATLANTIC participated. For months since then, it has been carrying on the work . . . utilizing the amazing discoveries which were made. And it has succeeded in producing the fuel it wanted to . . . a NEW WHITE FLASH . . . so superior in every way that only by trying it can you learn the vast difference between it and yesterday's gasolines.

WE WANT your VERDICT

We want YOU to pass judgment on this new fuel. In your own car. On roads selected by yourself.

SATURDAY'S the day. Fill your tank to the brim with the NEW WHITE FLASH, and then go out and look for great things. You'll find them!

Look for unusual power. The NEW WHITE FLASH is believed to be the most powerful motor fuel ever offered at or near its price.

Look for sensational pick-up. Those who have already tried it say it has no equal in this respect.

Look for a smoother-running engine.

The new formula means an even charge to every cylinder.

Look for new economy. More mileage.

Quicker starting. Less use of the choke.

These things mean many dollars saved, at a time when dollars count!

Be sure to try it. We want your verdict. We think it will be: "Yes, the NEW WHITE FLASH is POWERFULLY BETTER."

Ann Harding Is Rescued At Sea

Clings To Overturned Sailboat For Several Hours Before Rescue

EXPERIENCE OCCURS NEAR HAVANA, CUBA

(International News Service) HAVANA, May 4.—Ann Harding and Alexander Kirkland, film stars, and Marie Lombard, secretary to the actress, were safe here today after a narrow escape in the shark-infested waters off the Havana-Biltmore Yacht Club.

They were rescued a short time after the skipper of their capsize fishing smack was killed by one of the dangerous sea monsters. Miss Harding and Kirkland arrived here a few days ago for a vacation, denying they were engaged.

Rescued In Time

George Andrews, assistant secretary of the American embassy, sailing in his small craft, found the three companions clinging to the keel of the overturned fishing boat. He hauled them to safety after they had battled for life for four hours.

Later, Miss Harding told of the perilous adventure in these words: "Our sailboat capsized as we were making a turn. We all succeeded in getting firm holds on the keel and pulled ourselves almost out of the water. There we waited for aid."

"Finally the master of our boat decided to swim to shore for help. He struck out but swam only a short distance when a fin cut through the water. The fin was going at the swimming man—and there was a scream and he was dragged down, under the surface."

The Hinges of the Heart

By Phil Moore

MONEY is the greatest thing in the world to me," declared Adrienne McClure emphatically. "That is why I am going to marry Fuller Marston." She had dropped in for a cup of tea with Aunt Agatha, whose handsome old Colonial home was the Mecca for all the relatives in search of a good time.

"I called in young Dr. Martin Craddock last week when I developed a bad cold. He asked about you. Promising young fellow! He is getting quite a big general practice, I hear." Aunt Agatha looked up very casually at the pretty girl who was sitting on the other side of the tea cart. "Dear me, you've dropped a lump of sugar," she cried. "Have another!"

Adrienne could not meet the faded blue eyes that were watching her so intently. "I haven't seen Martin for a long time," she said quietly. "I am glad to hear that he is doing so well." Then, anxious to change the disturbing topic of conversation, she said abruptly: "That is a wonderful ruby you wear, Aunt Agatha. Looks as if it might have a history!"

Aunt Agatha set down her fragile tea cup and turned the ring back and forth on her withered old hand. Her fine white head bent to watch the lights that burned and then were lost in the rare jewel. "It represents a romantic tragedy. When I was a girl," she resumed, knowing that all girls like love stories of the past, "I had two suitors. One was rich and one was poor. I married for money, thinking that it was the greatest thing in the world, as you think now. There were no children, no softening influence to warm my heart that slowly withered and died up like a dead leaf in the forest, for I found out, all too soon, that my husband had married me for my pretty face and we had no foundation of love on which to build any lasting marital happiness.

"Dear Aunt Agatha! And we have all thought that you were so happy. You have everything, it seems," cried Adrienne pushing the tea cart aside and drawing a stool to Aunt Agatha's feet, where she could sit with her two hands clasping the wrinkled one where the ruby glowed like a drop of blood.

"Everything but love, the magic something that keeps the lights on life's altar aflame. The poor young fellow I loved and would not marry because I wanted the luxuries that money could buy died years ago. In the meantime he had become a great industrial leader and amassed a fortune. He left this ring to me along with a brief, tragic note, saying that the fire in the heart of his ruby, like his love for me, would burn forever. All that wealth of love I gave up just for a ribbon to stick in my coat and a flower to wear in my hair," she added, figuratively pathetic. "The Creator of things as they are does not bless a union founded on shams. My husband, discontented and grasping to the very day of his death, was never happy. I have wealth, influence and friends, but I have paid dearly for them, giving in exchange the priceless gift of baby lips, soft and warm at my breast, and the touch of little roseleaf fingers, curling around my own. Dear girl, think twice before you marry Fuller Marston!"

There were tears in Adrienne's great dark eyes. She said nothing, only patted the wrinkled hands in her strong young grasp. A fresh wind stirred the curtains at the windows and carried to them the fragrance of sweet scrubs, bruised by some hand, perhaps unconsciously, in passing. It breathed beautiful memories to the girl, but to the little old lady, almost lost in the great tapestry chair, it carried only the scent of dead roses—asbes of roses and dreams. As she sat there, she looked like some delicate bit of Dresden china. There seemed nothing about her alive, but the faded blue eyes, eloquent with regret, and the ruby on her hand that burned with the undying love of her lost youth.

"All of us love you!" whispered the girl, thoughtfully sad at this picture of Springtime, blighted by the keen frost of greed.

"The hinges on the door of my heart are rusty from disuse," said Aunt Agatha. "They creak and the door will not open all the way, even when I try to let in a bit of the sunshine of love generously offered by other women's children. But we have talked enough of the past." The little old lady brightened perceptibly. "What shall I give you for a wedding present? If you had married young Doctor Craddock, which, of course, is out of the question now, I expected to build you a modest bungalow on the corner of my big lot here, but Fuller Marston has a home as elegant as any in the city to offer you. I darestay I will give you pearls, a well-matched string from Tiffany's. They will do very nicely, I think, I must order them at once."

A servant opened the door and Doctor Martin Craddock came in, his handsome boyish face smiling eagerly. Then he saw Adrienne and the smile died out of his eyes as he bowed perfunctorily over the wrinkled old hand where the ruby glowed like a drop of blood.

"Doctor," began Aunt Agatha apologetically, "if you are not in a great hurry will you wait here for ten minutes while I write a business letter? I must get it away in the night mail. Adrienne, will you entertain the doctor for me? I will be right back," she promised, and smiling like a scheming child, she passed out, carefully closing the door on the two.

"Of course I would have timed my visit for some other hour if I had known that you would be here. I hope that you will generously try to believe the meeting is quite unintentional," said Doctor Craddock stiffly.

There was a silence, poignant with memories of regret and disillusionment. Then the young doctor lifted his head and looked at her, this girl who loved him but would not marry him because she hated poverty. She was holding out her hands to him. Something in her eyes drew him steadily toward her. In them he read infinite love, sympathetic understanding and enduring courage, born of one of life's few soul-stirring moments. He caught her hands and crushed them in his own. He took her into his arms and held her close. She could hear his heart pounding under her flushed cheeks. No rust on the hinges of that heart! They would keep its door swinging wide to welcome all the love they could crowd into a single lifetime.

"I love you," she told him simply. "We will work together. There is no poverty but poverty of the heart." Aunt Agatha tapped discreetly, then came in with a hopeful smile curving her thin lips. "My dears!" she cried, sudden tears dimming the faded blue eyes.

Two pairs of arms went around her and met in a clinging embrace. "We are going to have our living room in the bungalow done in old blue, just like this one," said Adrienne, bending over to kiss the quivering face of the richly poor little lady whose eyes would never glimpse the glory of the promised land, toward which they had set their young faces, although she herself had pointed the way to Adrienne.

EDITH sat looking at the tips of her shoes. It was an odd habit, as her sister Lois declared. Edith was generally in a mood of momentous quandary when she gazed at her shoe tips. In the present instance the shoe tips covered nerve and bone raked feet that were easing up for a short spell from duties that began at 6 a. m. and continued until she had crumpled into the old rocker by the window and gazed longingly into the outer world.

To be the homemaker for two business women of fair and goodly proportions, endowed with divergent wills, desires unduly sharpened by unattainable longings, appetites whetted for goodsome edibles and an overwhelming love of purple and fine linen meant work. Yes, the labors of cook, waitress, chambermaid, milliner, dressmaker to the two beings who ruled Edith's world of love and duty.

It had been decreed by these self-same wage earners when the last one of their parents was laid to rest in the old churchyard that as Edith was of the marriage age she should be relegated to the post of caretaker for her younger and more charming sisters. Surely, with her plain homely spun face no man would look at her twice, unless by accident; and as she was not versed in the present technical methods of earning the wherewithal for living she had found her proper place.

She sighed heavily, and then as the imaginary flutter of bills to come made her wonder how she was going to pay them she had fallen a-gazing at her unsightly shoe ends that protruded from beneath her skirt. And again she ruminated as to how she could wedge the price of a pair of shoes between the paid bills.

The girls could not give her their usual allowance this month, as Marian had ruled that they must have Easter gowns. It was all right, of course, but "I'd starve if that would help or go barefooted—only the girls would squeal." Edith gave an inward wall: "Oh, if Aunt Betsy had only left me something else besides that automobile—placarded, too, that it was not to be sold until two years after her death. It looks as if the wise dear wanted to train my nerves and fit me to be the burden bearer for the family. But what a nice little nest's egg it would have been for just such an emergency as a pair of shoes!"

Well, the automobile has given the two charges dependent upon her for so many of the good things of life joyrides that had served as exhibitors to vary the humdrum of their business careers. Edith smiled in response to old Jerry's greeting as his antiquated carryall—the only station hack—lumbered past the window, and then continued the study of her shoe tips and the thought of Aunt Betsy's ridiculous legacy.

Suddenly her eyes snapped, and, notwithstanding she was 35 years old, she clapped her hands. "I'll do it, and do it now," she muttered. "I may be a fool, but I know I can catch that 4:30 train from the city. Jerry's rheumatic conveyance isn't much of a live wire, and I'll get a passenger or two and make the price of those shoes!"

Fifteen minutes later Edith, in her four-year-old serge, with Marian's "Tam" jammed upon her head, whirled out of the barn. "I just wish I could get a man for a passenger," she soliloquized as she sped swiftly down the dusty road. "They never haggle about the fare. Oh, there's the train whistle!" A turn of her hand and the car, with an easy swirl, rolled around the curve and came to a stop beside the low wooden platform.

Edith craned her neck, but there was not a passenger in sight. She groaned inwardly, but the light dashed back to her eyes. She had sighted a man with a valise and a golf bag.

"Excuse me," the voice was pleasant. "Could you tell me where I could get a conveyance?"

"Right here," snapped Edith. "Take you wherever you want to go!" She was unconsciously imitating Jerry's style.

The man's gray eyes glimmered with some surprise blended with some amusement as they note two luminous brown eyes and a few tendrils of hair escaping coquishly from beneath the "Tam." But Edith's cheeks only reddened furiously as she felt the sweep of the gray eyes, and suddenly realized that she must look a fright with the hoydenish cap.

The clean shaven jaws. Edith was prepared to maintain her own in regard to the fare. "But, bless you," she afterwards confided to one of the wage-earners, "he never mentioned such a thing as fare." A few inquiries were made as to the distance to Stoneledge, and when Edith was reminded of Jerry's way of doing business, and demanded briskly "Any baggage to go up?"

"No, that came yesterday."

And then, as Edith heard the door click, with a loud snort of triumph the car glided forward, swung into the road and they were off.

"I wonder if he thinks he's getting a free ride? Well, I guess not." Edith was thinking of those shoes. She stole a shy look at the owner of the gray eyes. They were staring at her.

He had an honest face with a manly ugliness that appealed to her. She'd risk the face. He was city bred, she could tell that by the cut of his clothes, the swing of his hand as he took out a cigar, and the easy courteousness of his manner as he asked if she objected to his smoking. Edith could have hugged him for that, for it showed he considered her a lady, and it was a reminiscent reminder of the days when she had had a romance of her own.

"You said you wanted to go to Stoneledge. Nice place," she remarked laconically, just the way she had seen Jerry do when he wanted to go fishing for information to store his mind for gossip.

"I thought so when I bought it a few months ago."

"Bought it a few months ago?" Edith was undone, for this pleasant man, with the kindly gray eyes, was her opposite neighbor, the father of the well-behaved boy and girl with whom she had become so friendly the last week or so. But the tumult in Edith's soul was

The Wrong Sister

By Monte Darrell

WITH her gray slippered foot, Bettina petulantly poked the smoldering logs on the old brass andirons until the dying fire flared into flame.

"You will ruin those perfectly good slippers," sighed her big sister, busy at the tea cart drawn up beside her. "Just because mother suggested that we give up something we really cared for during Lent is no occasion for you to get in a buff. If there is not a spirit of real self-sacrifice back of it, the deed itself is not commendable nor worthy."

"Don't talk highbrow to me, Phoebe dear." Bettina picked up a sugared bun and between bites made her cause for grievance clear to her indulgent sister. "Billy Brazelton asked to take me to the Country already had a date with Tom Harris. I suppose I might as well be engaged to Tom right away," said Bettina dismissively, "and get over with it. It will be just like a cold shower bath—after the first shock is over, it will not be so bad perhaps."

"Why, Bettina Gibson, what an awful thing to say! You ought to wear sackcloth and put ashes on your head for a week to do penance for that."

"Penance? Won't I be doing penance all the rest of my natural life by being married to Tom Harris and his million dollars? Some day when I ride down an avenue in that gray limousine lined with old rose that Tom wants to give me just as soon as I will say the word I will look out to see Billy," there was an ominous pause, "and his wife. He will marry some poor girl just for love. They will be strolling along happy because they are together." Bettina sat down on the arm of Phoebe's chair and her great wistful eyes looked into the dancing flames of the fire. "And then, some day, there may be somebody else besides. Billy will push a big white buggy with the girl's hand tucked under his on the handle."

"Bettina!" cried a shocked Phoebe. "do you know what you are saying?"

The young girl slipped an arm around Phoebe's neck and cuddled her head against a soft, gray gown that matched the slipper she had blackened a little on the log. She bent her own head lovingly to touch Phoebe's. "Oh, honey," she said, "I am so silly. Tom is nice and good and eminently respectable—he was quoting her father now—"and capable of supporting me in the style to which I am accustomed. He is father's partner, a young man of sterling qualities."

"Hush, Bettina! You sound like a female society editor writing up the groom at a wedding. Father is merely acting for your material well-being. A perfectly clean, nice fellow, worth a million, does not come along every day and ask a girl to marry him. Of course, you are young and foolishly romantic—we all pass through that stage of life. When you are older you will appreciate father's effort to see you well established. Love in a cottage, provided it is an up-to-date bungalow, is one thing; but love in a little rented place like Billy would have to offer you, where the kitchen sink leaked and the stove smoked, would be another thing—quite different."

"There might be a porch with roses climbing over it, where I could run when the stove smoked."

The butler came in with a card. "To see Miss Phoebe," he announced.

"Why, what do you suppose Tom Harris wants with me?" she asked. Bettina could not help but notice how nervous she was when she jumped up and, looking into the mirror, patted her brown locks into tidiness.

"How should I know? I will slip into the library." She went into the next room and pulled the heavy velvet curtains together behind her.

"Phoebe, dear, I can not stand this any longer," Bettina heard Tom Harris exclaiming excitedly. She paused to listen. "I love you, do you understand, and every time I come around here somebody pushes Bettina right into my arms. I tried to like her, to love her, just because your father seemed to expect it and everybody took it for granted that I was crazy about her. What is the matter? I don't care who hears me now. I have to go West on a big deal tomorrow, and I am not going alone. You have to marry me and go with me." Bettina put out a hand to steady herself.

Was that soft, slightly rotund Tom Harris, with his watery blue eyes and quadruple chins talking in such determined fashion. Then Phoebe's voice sounded doubtfully in reply.

"Oh, Tom, I do love you, and I want to go with you anywhere, but Bettina expects—"

"The sky to drop downstairs to make her a necklace. She wants to give nothing in return, while you, oh, Phoebe, dear, you are so different."

Bettina giggled, thrust an old rose handkerchief between her teeth and stopped her ears with her slender, pink-tipped fingers. Then when the little cooling dove sounds had ceased for a minute in the next room she drew a long breath, coughed directly and walked to the door.

She pulled the curtains apart and, lifting her hands high over her head, cried: "Bless you, my children!" Then she made a little rush for a telephone book and came back again. "It is all off for that Saturday night dance, eh, brother-in-law?" she laughed at the crimson pair before her. "B-B-Billy Brazelton—what is his number?"

A light came into Tom Harris' watery blue eyes. "I forgot to tell you the news. Billy is moving into a swell apartment on Riverside Drive. The old scoundrel made a big deal in brass, sold his patent for regulating steam to the Browne Radiator Company and cleaned up a cool million for himself. What do you think about that?"

There was such a radiance in Bettina's pretty young face that for the minute she looked gloried. She clasped the telephone book with both arms to her throbbing breast.

"I don't care if he is worth a million. Some time," said Bettina, her eyes sweet with dreams, "you will ride down an avenue in your gray limousine lined with old rose, Phoebe, and you will see Billy and me walking along, happy just because we are together, and then some day, perhaps, perhaps—"

"Bettina!" cried Phoebe warningly, breaking in on love's young dream.

"I guess our kitchen sink won't leak nor our stove smoke any more than yours," said Bettina haughtily.

A minute later they heard her glad young heart calling Billy. "It is all right about Saturday night. It is all right about everything forever, Billy, dear."

"Now," said the school-teacher during reading lessons, glancing round the class, "can any of you tell me what is the meaning of 'divers diseases'?"

"Please, sir," said Tommy, with super-confidence, "divers diseases is water on the brain."

BLAKE MORRIS was a queer sort of fellow. From the first the men folks didn't seem to like him. Perhaps it was because of his silent ways though there were a good many of the fishermen who weren't over-talkative themselves. It was because he was an "outsider" whom they didn't know anything about, and could find out less.

In the Fall, when he put up his little shack in the lee of the dunes near the breakwater, the women folk were pretty curious about him. But he didn't notice them, not even Corrie Luce, who handed out the mail, and she was one of the pretty girls. Mighty nice, too. As Winter came on the women got busy with their housework and sewing, and so with them Morris sort of faded into the background.

He lived alone in his little house covered with tar paper, and he used to come over to the village every other day to buy provisions and to get the mail. All he'd get would be manila envelopes. Guess it was his stories coming back. Someone found out he wrote for magazines.

So Winter came on, and still Morris was left pretty much alone. And nobody envied him. In the Winter time the village got pretty bleak and barren. A fishing village is a clan-silent ways though there were a good many of the fishermen who weren't over-talkative themselves. We began to notice that when he came into the store he looked over at our cozy corner of the Men's Club with a kind of longing expression on his face, but he never said anything, and we wouldn't risk being snubbed like we had been when he first came. Guess that's why we didn't get acquainted very soon.

All this while some of the younger boys had been going out on the Devil's Bridge getting cod. It was pretty hard work, too, on those bitter days, with the wind blowing no-east and kicking up a nasty sea. The spray froze on the lines, and they were stiff and hard to handle. But the boys had families that needed the price those cod would bring. So when the weather wasn't too bad there'd be about five boats that would go out. And many a woman would pray that they would all come back that evening.

Along the middle of December there began to come some pretty heavy storms.

It was a clear day when the boats went out, but there was an ugly gray look in the no-east, and so along about noon when the blow hit us we weren't much surprised, but just the same we began to get sort of uneasy. Devil's Bridge was a pretty bad place to get caught in a storm, and when you're busy pulling lines you sometimes don't notice a gray look in the sky.

Along about 3 o'clock we sighted two little boats rounding the point and could hear the steady put-put of the engines. Dan Look and Stan Pease were accounted for, anyway. Soon two other boats came fighting their way around the point and into the cove behind the breakwater. Caleb Mayhew and Ossie Norton Chadwick's, came along, and we all heaved a sigh, then looked at each other with foolish-looking grins.

"Might 'a' known they'd 'a' come in safe," grunted Beria Davis.

"Listen!" said one of the men as he held up a warning hand. Above the roar of the wind and surf we heard the unsteady put-put-put of Tom Chadwick's engine.

"She's getting ready to die," somebody said. So we watched that boat edge up to the breakwater. Once around that jetty, we knew she'd be safe, but, outside, chances would be pretty slim. And dusk was closing in. Well, that boat was close to the jetty, and almost around when we heard the motor stop, stutter, then die.

"He'll go on the jetty!" someone shouted. We all rushed out. But from the store to the jetty was a good half-mile of dunes. The other boys, who had just come in, were ahead of us up the beach, but their boots held them back. We all knew we would be too late, because the boat was only a few yards from the jetty then. Still we kept on, hoping we could get there in time.

Then we heard the crash as the boat struck, and through the flying spray we saw the mast fall, caught a glimpse of a figure holding to one of the wire braces that held the jetty light, then when the wave fell back saw another figure clutching a man's limp body in his arms.

"Didn't know—Tom took anyone—out with him," Beria puffed.

Slowly the two figures edged their way in. The big fellow did most of the edging, though. The other one was like a rag doll in his arms. And each wave we expected to see them swept off these slippery rocks. It seemed a year before the two got clear of the danger place where the waves reached up.

The fellow who was doing the rescue act was in oilskins, so we couldn't see who 'twas stumbling in with that limp body. The boys went out to meet them. As they got into the lee of the seawall the fellow in slickers slipped his load down, then quietly slumped face down into the wet seaweed.

"It's Tom and—well, I'm—!" said Dan Look, as he lifted the limp figure in oilskins. It was Blake Morris! We didn't say a word, just gasped like fishes out of water.

That night we were all sitting around the stove at the Men's Club—not talking much, but doing a heap of thinking. Finally Beria Davis took a fresh chew of tobacco and cleared his throat.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I think that fellow Blake Morris should be one you!"

And dusk was closing in. Well, that boat was close to the jetty, and almost around when we heard the motor stop, stutter, then die.

"He'll go on the jetty!" someone shouted. We all rushed out. But from the store to the jetty was a good half-mile of dunes. The other boys, who had just come in, were ahead of us up the beach, but their boots held them back. We all knew we would be too late, because the boat was only a few yards from the jetty then. Still we kept on, hoping we could get there in time.

Then we heard the crash as the boat struck, and through the flying spray we saw the mast fall, caught a glimpse of a figure holding to one of the wire braces that held the jetty light, then when the wave fell back saw another figure clutching a man's limp body in his arms.

"Didn't know—Tom took anyone—out with him," Beria puffed.

Slowly the two figures edged their way in. The big fellow did most of the edging, though. The other one was like a rag doll in his arms. And each wave we expected to see them swept off these slippery rocks. It seemed a year before the two got clear of the danger place where the waves reached up.

The fellow who was doing the rescue act was in oilskins, so we couldn't see who 'twas stumbling in with that limp body. The boys went out to meet them. As they got into the lee of the seawall the fellow in slickers slipped his load down, then quietly slumped face down into the wet seaweed.

"It's Tom and—well, I'm—!" said Dan Look, as he lifted the limp figure in oilskins. It was Blake Morris! We didn't say a word, just gasped like fishes out of water.

That night we were all sitting around the stove at the Men's Club—not talking much, but doing a heap of thinking. Finally Beria Davis took a fresh chew of tobacco and cleared his throat.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I think that fellow Blake Morris should be one you!"

of us. He should be a member of this club." After a short pause, he said solemnly, "is the motion carried?"

"Aye!" 11 deep voices answered heartily.

Now Blake Morris has a boat like the rest of us, and he's building a cottage up near the Chadwick's. Some say he's looking for a wife, too. There's Corrie Luce, now; she's a pretty girl, and mighty nice, too.

Brown (narrating his experiences while almost drowning): "It was a terrible sensation! After I went down for the third time my past life flashed before me in a series of pictures."

Jones (edging forward with sudden interest): "You didn't happen to notice a picture of me lending you a fiver in the Autumn of 1913, did fellow Blake Morris should be one you?"

Music Festival To Be Staged Tonight

Public Will Hear Students At Cathedral; Concert Starts At Eight

New Castle music lovers won't find entertainment lacking tonight, for in the spacious Cathedral the third annual city-wide School Music Festival, in which over 1,000 students will participate, is to be held.

The music program opens to the public at 8 o'clock. Divided into three parts, the program this year, directed by Miss Gladys Rich, school music supervisor, will also bring Garth Edmondson, local organist, who will play several of his own compositions. During the first part of the evening the elementary school choruses will be heard, during the second part the intermediate choruses and in the last the junior and senior choruses will sing.

At the close a massed chorus, numbering more than 1,000 singers, will sing "Now the Day is Over." The girls' trio of the Senior high school will sing the same numbers that won it second place among 150 trios in the Pennsylvania Music and Forensic contest at Sunbury last week.

Proceeds of the evening will benefit New Castle's undernourished school children.

Wilksburg Girl Attacked By Thug, Escort Is Robbed

Manhunt Starts Near Pittsburgh For Armed Thug, Girl In Serious Condition

(International News Service)
PITTSBURGH, May 4.—Thoroughly aroused by the brutality of their quarry, city and county police today united in search for an armed thug who attacked a pretty 19 year old Wilksburg girl after binding her escort to a nearby tree.

The victim of the attack was taken to Montefiore hospital in a serious condition after she had escaped from Frick Woods, lonely wooded section and called for help.

Her escort, Robert Heintzelman, 19 freed himself of his bonds and reported the holdup to police.

The couple had alighted from the machine to push it from a muddy road near the woods, Heintzelman said, when the thug appeared, robbed Heintzelman of a small amount of cash and a watch, bound him to the tree, and then forced the girl to enter the woods at the point of a gun.

New Castle-Canton Prepare For Grid Battle

Ohio Eleven Is Rated As Strong

Coach Phil Bridenbaugh To Give New Castle Team Final Touches Tonight

Game To Start At 9 o'clock Daylight Time; Canton Will Send Large Delegation

Two highly trained school-boy football teams are getting their final instructions today. New Castle High under the watchful eye of Coach Philip H. Bridenbaugh will end training tonight at Taggart Field under the flood lights. Canton McKinley High under the direction of Coach Jimmy Aiken will be polished up this afternoon. Friday night at Taggart Field this city, these two scholastic grid machines will be called upon to test their strength.

The game will start at 9 o'clock Daylight Savings time according to Faculty Manager Ralph H. Gardner. This game is the highest of the year on the New Castle football program. It brings to New Castle one of the strongest high school grid teams in the United States. New Castle fans are fortunate in securing a team of the caliber of Canton for a spring engagement. The Canton team wants to put a stop to the new Castle steam-roller.

Lineup Undecided
Coach Bridenbaugh has not yet decided upon his starting lineup. Either Humphrey or Sorto will get the call to the right guard job and Ridley and Kneram are both anxiously waiting to climb into the quarterbacking role. Outside of these two positions and possibly the left halfback post the New Castle team is rather well set for Friday night. Anderson by his showing lately has earned the right to start the game at left-half place of Tommy Jones. However, the diminutive Jones has not given up the fight for a starting job and can be counted upon to give somebody a tough battle.

Sprinkling of Veterans
New Castle will have five veterans from last year in the starting lineup: Fred and Alex Shelloge, Raskowski, Lane and Kominic. Canton will have six lettermen back on the team—Captain Wilson Frye, a halfback, Maurice Swimmer, a halfback, Earl Haas and Harold Wyandt at tackles and Jim Huff a negro at left end and Irvin Shopwell at center. Shopwell was a sub-center last year but is one of the smartest football players on the Canton team.

Others on the Canton first team will be Johnny Katusin, or Bill Green at end, Tut Allen, a negro, and Eddie Maciag at the guards and they will weigh 180 and 155 respectively. The quarterback will likely be Jurovic or Virgil Huff and Al Abdullah at fullback. Abdullah is a new comer this year, and has been hitting the line like a ton of brick. Frye is the boy that New Castle will have to watch as he is rated one of the best running backs in the state of Ohio and is a famed broken field runner. The Canton team will average close to 165 pounds. Which is rather heavy for high school football players.

Very Fine Records
Canton only lost three games last year to East Liverpool, Alliance and Steubenville. The Canton victories were over such teams as Akron South, Akron Central, Massillon, Cleveland Heights, Cleveland University school and Youngstown Raven.

Against this formidable record the New Castle "Red Hurricane" record is submitted with New Castle undefeated and meeting such teams as Chancelor, Washington, Youngstown South, New Kensington, Turtle Creek, Altoona, McKeesport, and others. The New Castle team will average about 160 pounds. The Ohioans will outweigh the local, but they will not out-fight them, as shown by the enthusiasm in the workout Wednesday afternoon. New Castle wants to upset this Canton apple-cart and Friday night will be a good time to do it.

Expect Big Crowd
If the weatherman gives the scholastic boys a break tomorrow night you will see one of the biggest crowds in the past several years at Taggart Field. There is a feeling that this game is the best New Castle has ever arranged. The test will be the greatest that the locals have ever had. Canton is sending close to 1,000 fans to New Castle and New Castle can surely double that number.

The gates will open at 7:30 o'clock D. S. T.
Salesman: "What kind of a car would you like, madam, four, six or eight cylinders?"
Timid Customer: "Couldn't I be in with one?"

Rookies Weak With Willow

Big League Rookies Have Been Woefully Weak With Bat So Far This Year

By LES CONKLIN
International News Service Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, May 4.—While half a dozen rookie pitchers such as Walter Beck of Brooklyn, Russ Van Atta and Don Brennan of the Yankees, Ed Linke of Washington, Ed Fallenstein of the Braves and "Schoolboy" Rowe of Detroit have done brilliant work in the major leagues this year, the 1933 crop of rookies in other departments has produced only three outstanding stars.

They are Mike Higgins and Bob Johnson of the Athletics and Dick Gyselman of the Boston Braves.

Higgins Is Slugger.
Higgins, fielding well and leading all first-year men at bat with a mark of .356, has more than filled the shoes of Jimmy Dykes at the hot corner for the A's. Gyselman, who like Higgins is a third baseman and a product of the Pacific coast league, is batting .300 and has been called one of the finest prospects to break into the big show in years.

Pitchers excepted, Gyselman is the National league's only star rookie of the year and even he is having a hard time breaking into the lineup. Wilfred Knothe, the regular Boston third sacker, got back into the game yesterday and smacked a homer and a triple.

Finney Failure.
In the American league practically all the recruits are with Philadelphia and Detroit. Connie Mack has had fairly good luck with his five youngsters. Bob Johnson, with a mark of .286, is a long distance slugger. Ed Madjeski is batting .353 but doesn't get a chance to do much work behind the bat with Mickey Cochrane on the job.

Outfielder Lou Finney, hitting .258, has been a disappointment to his manager. Finney has hit only three of his previous starts this year.

Ed Chiocki, filling in at shortstop, is the poorest of Mack's rookies. He is batting only .135 and his fielding has cost the team about five defeats.

Bill Knickerbocker, hitting a measly .128, has failed to make good at shortstop for Cleveland. Pete Fox and Marvian Owen of Detroit also are weak with the willow. Fox is batting .219 and Owen .200. Frank Reiber, a catcher, is hitting .308, but has been used mainly as a pinch hitter.

Only Two Games.
Because of rain and cold, only two games were played in the majors yesterday. Thanks to homers by Knothe and Schulerich, the Braves beat Cincinnati, 6 to 4, and snapped the winning streak of Red Lucas, who had copped all three of his previous starts this year.

With "Poison Ivy" Andrews pitching, the Boston Red Sox trounced the St. Louis Browns, 6 to 2, for their first win after six straight defeats. Smead Jolley led the Boston attack on Bump Hadley with a triple, a double and a single.

HERE AND THERE IN SPORTS' LAND

Mrs. Helen Willis Moody will defend her singles title at Wimbledon this year according to a report from London.

Pompeoleon, Pompeonius, Trace Call and Dark Winter accompanied by Ladysman have arrived at Churchill Downs for the running of the Kentucky Derby, Saturday. Ladysman has been made the favorite.

When Johnny Broaca, Yale hurler, refused to pitch against a Navy semi-pro team, led by Albire Booth, Smokey Joe Wood ordered him to turn in his uniform.

Sing Sing prison football squad began spring training yesterday. Most of the 1932 stars were in the lineup. Alabama Pitts, James Scarpa and Joe Hayes, are on the team.

Rocco To Box Louie Cereer

Emmett's Brother To Exchange Blows With Pittsburgh Boy May 10

MORINI TO FIGHT TIGER ROBINSON

Featuring a card of eight excellent fights at the Shelby auditorium, Ellwood City, on Wednesday, May 10, will be George Rocco, brother of the famous Emmett, who will go three rounds with Louis Cereer of Pittsburgh, who is rated as the second best amateur boxer in the Smokey city.

Matchmaker Joe Latiano who is chairman of the sports committee of the Shelby board of directors, has taken great pains to secure only good fighters with reputations to battle his Ellwood City boys who have made a name for themselves in amateur boxing circles of the district.

No less than five different cities will be represented on the night of the fights. A suitable opponent who was willing to go on with Rocco could not be secured outside of Pittsburgh. Castle Morini who holds a championship in Beaver Valley is matched with Tiger Robinson of Beaver Falls. Joy Evans who is golden gloves champion of the district will fight Rich Gregory of Butler. Ray Atkinson is scheduled to battle Steve Brinzo, the man who knocked out Morley, and that's how Pete Boy and Howdy Mason will again continue their long grudge fight.

The boxing show is being staged under supervision of the A. A. U. George Chip of New Castle, former middleweight champion, will referee all bouts.

King Levinsky Kayoes Retzlaff

(International News Service)
CHICAGO, May 4.—Charley Retzlaff, a grungling farm boy from Duluth, took stock of his progress in the prize ring today and seemed to recall something about meeting King Levinsky last night at the Chicago Stadium. Charley isn't sure about what happened, because in less than a round he was sitting on the floor and it seemed to him that there was a band coming over the hill.

And before him, leaping up and down with Ghetto-like mirth, was a chubby figure he seemed to remember from somewhere. To some 5,000 patrons who suspected they had come to the wrong building, it was King Levinsky, and that's how it ended, with Charley on the floor and the Kingfish clowning.

As the referee counted over Retzlaff Ascher Hassen, a spectator, fell dead in his seat. His death was presumably caused by excitement.

Cold Weather Prevents Games

Louisville Is Jammed; Annual Derby Saturday

Hotels Are Crowded; Town Takes On Festive Air For Running Of Derby

LADYSMAN STILL FAVORITE HORSE

By DAVID J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 4.—Most of the money horses, including Charley P. the Florida derby winner; head play, Mr. Khayyam, who ran to a track record no later than Saturday last; and Ladysman, the two-year-old champion, will go for an airing today, as Louisville braced itself to sustain the impact of the final, furious forty-eight hours leading up to the running of the Kentucky Derby on Saturday. Little change is noted or even expected in the Derby situation. Ladysman still being 3-1 in the winter books, with the rest trailing all the way from 7 on head play to 80 on Big Red, Isaiah, Scisson and Silent Shot.

Only the town, in fact, is changing and will continue to change, gradually at first, then with something of a flourish, as race day brings its annual upsurge.

Hotels Are Crowded
Already, groups of foot guests are impeding progress as they stand endlessly in lobbies and gather on gutters and curbstones. The hotels are taking on a festive air and would seem to be coming by this honestly enough, with rates running from $6 to $15 a day. The routine programs at the Downs are getting an increasingly bigger play, too, and cabs are hard to find.

The hotel quotations are for the room with bath. The room without bath is, of necessity, cheaper. So is the room without the bed. If the weather is favorable, some of them will even have a try at the room without the ceiling.

This lacks comfort, convenience and privacy and, besides, you're liable to wind up with a perfect stranger on your bosom, but the cost is no more than the price of a pants presser and everything is very neighborly.

20 Horses May Start
Altogether, it looks like quite a day here for the $2 ticket, known at the track as "pleasure betting." I don't know exactly why, except maybe they mean that, at the end of the day the pleasure is all the management's. Anyhow, they've been venturesome enough here to keep the Derby purse at its established total of $50,000 added and, while the play may be comparatively light, I'm inclined to feel that they'll do all right, owing to the fact that they're ways have.

Present indications are that the overnight nominees will be comparatively light, too, not less than fifteen and certainly not more than twenty. Ladysman, having shipped in fair shape, is sure. So apparently are head play, Charley O. and Sarada, another 10-1 choice, not to forget Mr. Khayyam, son of Omar, who did 1-44 for a mile and a sixteenth for a track record in Maryland five days ago. This is only three-sixteenths off the derby distance, so the inference is that Mr. Khayyam is not a bad buy at 10-1.

Kerry Patch, winner of the Belmont futurity, should be ready to go. So should Broker's Tip, Pompeonius, stable mate of the favorite; and Trace Call. Knockaway was bad here the other day but Dark Winter may be worth the $500 overnight fee; also Fair Rochester, Inlander, Silent Shot, Warren, Jr., Strideaway and at top, the filly.

Lefty Miller, southpaw flinger and J. Serwatka, hurler for Brent are two hurlers in the National loop of the Twilight league who have plenty of smoke. Miller was in fine fettle when he allowed Brent to scatter his wildness resulted in four walks.

Miron caught a good game for Mahoning A. He was steady. The Gray boys found their offerings touched up seven times while Hattie and Frigine had plenty of stuff on the ball. Grace, Butler and Prescarro made the only errors in the Moarch-Mahoning tilt.

Right field at Volant will result in many hits going for less bases than on some of the other league diamonds. It doesn't take a long hit to hit the right embankment. Monday night one of the hits turned out to be a block ball as it hit a spectator in the field.

Fans throughout the county who wish to know the time of the different ball games should remember that there are two different times, fast and slow. League games are played at 5:30 p. m. fast time where D. S. T. prevails and 5:30 p. m. E. S. T. where slow time prevails.

Before the Lawrence county circuit was formed it was proposed to play no Saturday games. However, the schedule makers in deference to managers arranged games for Saturday afternoon. There will be games on the Cedar street ground here and at Brent, Saturday.

Bessemer High Trims Wampum

Pepe-Powell Have Pitching Duel For Nine Innings In Rain; Score 6-1

BESSEMER SCORES FIVE RUNS IN 10TH

Bessemer High baseball team continued their winning ways in the Class A County League yesterday at Wampum High by taking a 6 to 1 victory in a drizzle of rain. The game went 10 innings with Bessemer scoring five runs in the first half of the tenth. The pitching of Pepe and Powell was short of sensational for the kind of an afternoon that it was. The Bessemer hurler fanned 17 men, and the Wampum pitcher had 15 strikeouts. Pepe only allowed Wampum four hits.

Marshall Hits Homer
Marshall had a homer for Bessemer in the first inning and that was the only run the Fredericks coached team could get until the tenth frame. Powell held the upper-hand, but weakened and was relieved by McMichael in the last frame. Marshall had two hits, one of them a triple in the tenth inning that produced the winning run. Kosior and McMichael did the heaviest hitting for Wampum. Percic did not allow Wampum a hit, but walked two and hit one, taken out by Fredericks in the fourth inning.

Bessemer is undefeated in league play so far this year and are well on their way to the championship. Bessemer will play Shenango Monday night at the Shenango High field.

Union-Alumni Game Stopped By Rain Storm

Alumni Scores Safety On Union Before Rain Halts Game At End Of Half

Union high varsity lineup tossed a big surprise in the midst of a strong Union High Alumni team yesterday afternoon at the Union high field before a rain storm stopped play at the end of the first half of the game. The Alumni scored on the Unionites as the result of a blocked punt, just prior to the stopping of the battle.

Bozar dropped back to punt and the kick was blocked with an Alumni man falling on the ball back of the goal line.

Monico and Rowbottom were out of the regular Union varsity lineup due to injuries. The Union team threatened to score in the first period by taking the ball on a series of nice line plays to the 9-yard line where they were held for downs.

The Alumni threatened to score in the first period on two nice runs by Joe Jaworski and Ammons.

The Union varsity shows possibilities for this fall and will look a lot better with Rowbottom and Monico in the game. White played a fine game at right guard for Union. Critchlow, Jaworski and Sniezek looked good in the Alumni lineup.

Rails And Oils Lead In The Day's Transactions; Trend Is Higher

NEW YORK, May 4.—The rails and oils came to the stock market's support today and overcame early reactionary tendencies on further heavy profit-taking.

Buying in the oils was attributed to the hope that the present petroleum price crisis would bring a cure to the industry's ills. There was a natural recovery as well from the weakness of the last two days following dividend casualties.

The rails were buoyed by the sharp pick-up in traffic and the news that the administration's car-maintenance program would be submitted to congress during the day.

N. Y. Central, Atchafon, Union Pacific and Delaware & Hudson were the pacemakers.

The rest of the list followed with Consolidated Gas and American Telephone leading the utilities higher.

The market was a broad affair. Trading was active though at a slower pace than recent sessions.

The ticker lagged several times during buying flurries.

Farm stocks gave another good performance with Case Threshing and International Harvester in the van.

Motor shares were sluggish on profit-taking. Western Union and Columbian Carbon were strong specialties.

President Roosevelt's speech before the U. S. Chamber of Commerce tonight was a stimulating influence. The day's news likewise brought signs of further trade improvement with Pillsbury Flour increasing its dividend.

The dollar showed few changes of importance. Commodities were steady. The bond market was firm in all classes.

Ellwood High To Be Represented At Pitt Meet Saturday

Local Athletes To Furnish Own Transportation To District Track Meet

ELLWOOD CITY, May 4.—Ellwood City high will be represented at the annual Pitt interscholastic track and field meet at Pittsburgh on Saturday, despite the fact that the school is not sponsoring a track team this year.

The team that will go to Pitt Saturday will strongly resemble the one that won the Beaver county championship and placed second on the W. P. I. A. L. meet last year.

Even after it was announced that the school would not support a track team this year, 10 athletes took it upon themselves to train for any meet that would come up during the spring and provide their own expenses.

The 10 men received some old equipment from the school and have now been practicing faithfully for six weeks. Out of the prominent familiar faces of the team only that of Ralph Strouse, champion hurdler; John Lincoln, crack half-mile; Sam Cusator, miler, and Tom Barnes, quarter-miler, will be missing.

At present the team is composed of Captain Joe Welsh, Stanley Yanaskovitz and Leymarie, sprinters; Mike Paal and Red Vogt for the weights; Paul Kuben and Chuck McCloskey for the hurdles; Johnny Savor, javelin, and Bob Johnson and Orrin Logue, distance men.

In view of the fine spirit of the boys, Todd Lloyd had donated his services in coaching this aggregation. The team will pay their own transportation to Pittsburgh next Saturday.

They were cleaning out front the other day at the Engineering Works.

Among other jobs, the sign on the front of the building had to come off for a time, and back of the sign was another one, carved in the stone, "J. P. Witherow company".

Some of the old timers in New Castle would appreciate seeing that inscription for when that marked the plant, they were young men, working for one of the pioneers in the manufacture of blowing engines and huge metal pots. Out of the old J. P. Witherow company came a lot of real steel workers, machinists and technical men.

Just now the name of Witherow is occupying some portion of the public spotlight in Pittsburgh. William Witherow is prominently mentioned as a candidate for mayor of the city in the next campaign, and this gentleman is a nephew of the J. P. Witherow who was a figure in New Castle's industrial life many years ago.

The products of the old Witherow company and the present Pennsylvania Engineering works can be found in practically every country in the world, certainly in those countries where industry is known. India has a lot of P. E. products, Japan, England and many others.

Doctor's Advice On

PILES

Internal Treatment Best and

Guaranteed—He Says

When Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, who has given many years of his life to the study of the treatment of piles, says and has proved that the right and best way to gain freedom from this agonizing trouble is to take one Hem-Roid tablet three times a day—why go on dallying with salves, ointments and suppositories?

Remove the cause and your piles will vanish, no matter how severe they are or what name you give to them.

And that is why the makers of Hem-Roid authorize Eckerd's and New Castle Drug Co. and all modern druggists to say to sufferers—take the contents of one bottle of Hem-Roid and then if your piles have not gone or haven't started to disappear—get your money back—you'll be joyfully satisfied with the quick action of this efficient formula.
